ABSTRACT

This directory is an inventory of government and private organizations that administer exchange programs and related educational activities aimed at strengthening mutual understanding between people of the United States and other nations. Descriptive narratives provided with the entries are drawn from material provided by the organizations or obtained from other directories. Individual academic institutions with international programs are omitted because of the volume. The listings are divided into three large sections. The first lists 40 United States government departments and agencies. Only those offices that have international programs of their own or are points of contact for international visitors are listed. Unless the purposes and programs are self-explanatory, a brief description is included. Addresses are given for offices within a department or agency if they differ from that of the headquarters. The second section lists federal boards and commissions and contains six entries. The final division identifies private organizations. This section lists 216 private organizations that sponsor cultural or educational programs, or work to promote international understanding and world peace. Many of the groups center on a specific nation or area, or on a particular interest such as law, libraries, or area studies. At the end of the directory is an alphabetical listing of all the entries, a subject index that categorizes agencies and organizations according to principal fields of interest, and a list of acronyms. FOREWORD

This Directory provides an inventory of U.S. government and private organizations that administer exchange programs and related educational activities aimed at strengthening mutual understanding between Americans and the peoples of other nations. It is the hope of the Directory's editors that the Directory will facilitate public contact with the organizations listed and foster increased contact between the organizations themselves. Descriptive narratives are drawn from material provided by the organizations or obtained from other directories.

While it is the editors' intention to provide a comprehensive listing of exchange organizations, there will inevitably and regrettably be some relevant institutions overlooked. We also caution readers that inclusion in the Directory in no way constitutes endorsement by the U.S. Information Agency or any other agency of the U.S. government. Finally, we have intentionally omitted individual academic institutions whose international programs are collectively so numerous they would require a separate directory.

At the end of the Directory the reader will find an alphabetical listing, a subject index which categorizes agencies and organizations according to principal fields of interest and a list of acronyms.

We sincerely hope that this publication will be of lasting value to users both overseas and in the United States.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES

Entries for U.S. Government departments and agencies list only those offices which have international programs of their own or are points of contact for international visitors.

In most instances, the purposes and programs of these offices are self-explanatory; for others, a descriptive line or two is included. More detailed information is generally readily available since most government agencies issue information or fact sheets about their programs.

Addresses are given for offices within a department or agency when they differ from that of the headquarters. It can be assumed that individual offices listed without addresses either are located in or may be contacted through the headquarters.

The user's attention is drawn to another publication published annually by the U.S. Information Agency which directly complements this Directory's government section--the annual Report on U.S. Government International Exchange and Training Programs. It provides detailed data on approximately 100 exchange and training programs administered by 23 federal agencies. Copies may be obtained free of charge from:

USIA encourages "the sharing of ideas and cultural activities among the people of the United States and the people of other nations." With staffs in Washington and in some 200 cities abroad, the Agency administers programs which inform other nations about American society and U.S. Government policies. It also provides opportunities for Americans to learn about the rest of the world. USIA uses a variety of means to accomplish its goals, including direct personal contacts through educational and cultural exchanges, broadcasts by the Voice of America, publications, television programs, exhibits, libraries, and "video dialogues," via satellite, between American and foreign leaders.

Ralph H. Vogel, Staff Director . . . . . (202) 619-4290

The J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board, formerly the Board of Foreign Scholarships, was created by the Congress in 1946 under the legislation which established the Fulbright educational exchange program. Presidentially appointed, the Board is composed of 12 educational and public leaders with statutory responsibility for the selection of all academic exchange grantees and the supervision of the Fulbright Program worldwide, including the formulation of policy guidelines governing Fulbright exchanges administered by the U.S. Information Agency and the Department of Education.

CULTURAL PROPERTY ADVISORY COMMITTEE
c/o U.S. Information Agency
301 - 4th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20547

Ann Guthrie Hingston, Staff Director . . . . . (202) 619-6612

The Cultural Property Advisory Committee, located in USIA's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, oversees U.S. implementation of the 1970 UNESCO Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property. Established by Public Law 97-446, the Committee is responsible for advising the President, or his designee the USIA Deputy Director, on whether the United States should impose import bans on archaeological and ethnographic materials to advance in situ scholarly research. The President appoints the Committee's eleven members to fill positions, designated by law, as follows: three experts in archaeology, anthropology or ethnology; three experts in the international sale of art; two representatives of the museum community; and two representatives of the general public.

INDO-U.S. SUBCOMMISSION ON EDUCATION AND CULTURE

280 Madison Avenue, Room 1202, New York, New York 10016

Ted M. G. Tanen, American Executive Director . . . . . (212) 725-2666

Established by a joint commission between the governments of the United States and India in 1974, the Indo-U.S. Subcommission sponsors educational and cultural exchanges between the two countries. A principal activity is the Subcommission's Indo-American Fellowship Program which seeks to draw Americans who are not India specialists but whose proposals aim to stimulate communication and collaboration in the humanities, social sciences, creative arts, and in such professions as architecture, law and business. Applications are available from the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (see listing under Private Organizations).

JAPAN-UNITED STATES FRIENDSHIP COMMISSION
1200 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Suite 3416, Washington, D.C. 20004

Dr. Eric Gangloff, Executive Director . . . . . (202) 275-7712

The Japan-United States Friendship Commission is an independent Federal agency established by Congress in 1975 to administer a U.S. Government Trust Fund for the promotion of scholarly, cultural and public affairs activities between Japan and the United States.

PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE ON THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES
1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Room 526, Washington, D.C. 20506

Diane J. Paton, Executive Director . . . . . (202) 682-5409

The Committee is an advisory body concerned with increasing private support for the arts and humanities. It provides a forum for discussion of policy issues which can have an impact on the nature and level of such support. America's system of philanthropy, supported in part by Federal tax policies, is the subject of many inquiries from foreign nations, and the Committee is developing ways to share this information in a more systematic fashion. Committee looks to fostering greater private support for international, educational and artistic programs.

UNITED STATES ADVISORY COMMISSION ON PUBLIC DIPLOMACY
U.S. Information Agency
301 - 4th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20547

Bruce Gregory, Staff Director . . . . . (202) 619-4457

The Commission is a bipartisan and independent body created by Congress to oversee the international information and cultural programs of the U.S. Government. Composed of seven members appointed by the President, the Commission is required by law to assess the programs of the U.S. Information Agency and to make recommendations to the President, the Congress, the Secretary of State, the Director of the U.S. Information Agency, and the American people.

The Academy for Educational Development (AED) is an independent nonprofit organization committed to addressing human development needs through education, communication, and information. Since its founding in 1961, AED has conducted projects throughout the United States and in more than 100 countries worldwide. AED's primary emphasis is on providing educational services, with 90 percent of our activities occurring in the international arena. In 1991-92, 76 percent of its international programs are targeted on formal and informal education, training, and human resources development. Other international activities are related to communication and training programs, including management training for developing country professionals.

Since 1979, AED has in organized over 200 professional exchange programs for more than 2,000 visitors, including 35 programs in 1990 and 40 programs in 1991. AED's international exchange projects have reflected AED's overall goals, and have drawn on the historic strengths of AED's staff -- education, communication, and information. They have focused on topics such as new technology for higher education, academia and the corporate world, teaching about America, education in the United States, vocational and technical education, print and broadcast journalism, advanced communications technology and policy, the role of the media in a democracy, state and local government, American libraries, American literature, and U.S. culture and the arts. Most recently, AED has drawn on its staff's expanding experience in designing and conducting projects on drug abuse control, health care, agriculture, entrepreneurship, economic development, and environmental protection. In addition, since 1986, AED has coordinated the technical and academic review process for the USIA-sponsored University Affiliations Program, which supports institutional partnerships between U.S. and foreign colleges and universities.

THE ACADEMY FOR STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT (ASLG)

FAX 265-6332

The African-American Institute (AAI), founded in 1953, is the largest and oldest private U.S. organizations devoted exclusively to strengthening relations between the United States and Africa. The mission of The African-American Institute is to foster development in Africa, primarily through strengthening its human resources, and to promote mutual understanding between Americans and Africans.

Over the decades, AAI's activities have included designing and implementing manpower training programs for private and government organizations in Africa and in the United States; holding conferences for African and U.S policymakers; conducting visitor programs; and providing services to encourage U.S. trade and investment in Africa. Additional programs include effective governance, constituency building, women in development, environmental sustainability, economic recovery and growth, and human resource development.

With headquarters in New York, offices in Washington, D.C. and Johannesburg, South Africa and representatives in 23 African countries, more than 100 projects have been implemented and over fourteen thousand Africans assisted with professional and academic degree training.

The American Association of Museums, founded in 1906, is the national organization representing the museum community and addressing its needs, thereby enhancing the ability of museums to serve the public interest. AAM's membership includes museums of all sizes and kinds throughout the United States--from art museums, natural history museums, and historical sites to science and technology centers, arboretums, planetariums, children's museums, zoos, and botanical gardens. AAM counts more than 11,800 active members, including more than 8,500 museum professionals, volunteers, and trustees; more than 2,500 museums; and nearly 750 corporate affiliates. The AAM represents and advocates the interests of U.S. museums, promoting understanding of the responsibilities, functions, and needs of museums among the general public and leaders in the private and public sectors. The AAM also leads the effort in maintaining and strengthening professional standards, through activities designed to improve the overall quality of museum programs and operations.

The AAM sponsors a variety of international projects through its Department of International Programs and AAM/ICOM. It is affiliated with and houses the U.S. National Committee of the International Council of Museums (AAM/ICOM), which is the worldwide museum professional organization. The Department administers International Partnerships Among Museums (IPAM), which seeks to form long-lasting linkages between museums here and abroad; this goal is achieved by exchanging mid-level personnel who conduct a joint or complementary project.

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION (ABA)
International Legal Exchange (ILEX)
1700 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006

Edison W. Dick, Executive Director, ILEX . . . . . (202) 393-7122
FAX 347-9015

The International Legal Exchange Program of the American Bar Association encourages increased communication, cooperation and information exchange among members of the legal profession worldwide. American practitioners going overseas and foreign practitioners coming to the U.S. (including lawyers, judges, cooperate counsel and governmental legal officers, but not students) are placed for several months with appropriate firms or departments to observe and participate in the host country's legal system. Visits to representative legal institutions are arranged for individual foreign lawyers and judges and small groups to study particular areas of U.S. jurisprudence.

ILEX also arranges longer programs for individual lawyers who visit the United States on grants from the United Nations, United States government agencies or foreign governments. These visitors normally are practitioners or government officials who come to this country on a program to study a specific area of law which requires travel to several cities or states. ILEX also sponsors briefing trips for U.S. lawyers to various countries or regions in the world. These briefing trips are intended to provide lawyers an in-depth learning experience regarding the legal and judicial system of the host country and/or region.

The Association of American Law Schools was founded in 1900. Its principal purpose, as embodied in its bylaws, is "the improvement of the legal profession through legal education." AALS shares with the American Bar Association the responsibility for accreditation of schools of law in the U.S. It also functions as a traditional educational association and provides its institutional membership with a wide range of services, such as presenting professional development workshops and conferences for legal educators and administrators.

AALS assists schools in identifying various government programs likely to be of importance to those schools; holds an annual meeting; publishes various studies and reports; and interprets the mission and needs of legal education to government, the general public and potential students. The AALS serves as the scholarly society in the academic discipline of the law, representing law teachers in the community of scholars. The Association receives numerous international visitors interested in U.S. legal education and the law and has been represented in delegations abroad. It has presented programs jointly with organizations of legal scholars from other countries. Among its sections with international interests are Canadian-American Cooperation, Comparative Law, Constitutional Law, Graduate Programs for Foreign Lawyers, International Law, International Legal Exchange, and many other sections that touch on multinational, international, or comparative aspects of the law.

The Council of Graduate Schools, established in 1961, provides graduate schools opportunities for joint action and interaction. Its purpose is the improvement and advancement of graduate education. The approximately 400 public and private member institutions of the Council collectively award 99 percent of all research doctorates and 85 percent of all master's degrees earned annually in the U.S.

The Council carries out numerous activities, among which are the development of policy statements on major issues in graduate education; the performance of selected research studies; participation with other organizations of higher education for the promotion of legislation to improve graduate education; and publication of reports, a newsletter, occasional papers, and proceedings of the annual meeting. The Council also conducts workshops for newly-appointed deans, and conferences/seminars on topical issues in addition to its annual meeting where major issues of graduate education are discussed. Among the Council's publications are Graduate Study in the U.S.: A Guide for Prospective International Graduate Students, 1991, and International Graduate Students: A Guide for Graduate Deans, Faculty, and Administrators, 1991.

DEBT FOR DEVELOPMENT COALITION, INC. (DDC)
2021 L St., N.W., Suite 510, Washington, D.C. 20036

John B. Ross, President ..... (202) 467-0881
Margaret P. Fahs, Senior Vice President 467-0881
FAX 467-4093

The Debt for Development Coalition, Inc. seeks to increase the level of resources available to the process of international development through innovative exchanges of debt, usually owed by developing country governments to foreign institutions. To this end, DDC works primarily with governments of developing countries, non-government organizations, existing and potential donors and creditors to fashion mutually beneficial debt for development programs, including international educational exchange programs. Such transactions enhance funding for development while lowering the external debt of the developing countries involved.

DDC was founded in 1988 with core support from the U.S. Agency for International Development and is governed by a Board representing umbrella groups of private voluntary organizations, U.S. colleges and universities, cooperatives, and international agricultural research institutes. It publishes guides, including a guide to Debt for Education, occasional papers, and current debt and market data.

Philip O. Geier, Vice President for External Affairs 257-7751
Ward Heneveld, Director of the School for International Training 257-7751
FAX 257-1989

The Experiment in International Living, a private, nonprofit organization, has conducted programs in international education and exchange since 1932. The oldest organization of its kind, it initiated the homestay concept of learning the culture of another country by living with one of its families. EIL operates worldwide, endeavoring to promote international understanding through citizen exchange, career-oriented higher education, language instruction, and projects in international development and training. It has no political, ideological, or religious affiliations. EIL is supported by gifts from individuals, foundations and corporations, through contracts, and by fees paid by program participants. It also depends on the donated time of volunteers.

The Experiment's exchange and language programs abroad are available to American high school and college students and older adults. EIL also offers homestay and intensive English programs in the U.S. for people from abroad. More than 300,000 people of all ages from over 100 countries have participated in Experiment programs throughout its history.

In the U.S., The Experiment offers international visitors homestays with American families for periods of three weeks to a full academic year (high school only). Language training is offered at three U.S. sites for both students and professionals learning English as a second language. Additional short-term intensive language tutorials and individually-designed language study programs are also available at The Experiment's Vermont headquarters. Internationally, The Experiment is a federation of over 40 member organizations.

The Experiment's accredited and degree granting academic division, the School for International Training (SIT), was established for professionals in international careers. SIT conducts two and four year Bachelor's programs in world issues and international studies, and Master's programs in the teaching of languages and intercultural management. The School combines experience-based education, intensive coursework, campus activities, and a broad range of field experiences such as professional internships and practice teaching assignments. It also offers specialized non-degree professional training programs, four to six weeks in length, covering project development, human resource management, training of trainers and general management level skills for middle and upper level managers.

The Institute of International Education (IIE), the largest U.S. higher educational exchange agency, provides administrative services for the predoctoral Fulbright Program, the Humphrey Fellowships and a portion of the USIA

International Visitor Program. The Institute coordinates the South African Education Program, a joint project of U.S. universities, foundations, and corporations and the U.S. Agency for International Development. In total, IIE administers 200 education and training programs for the U.S. and foreign governments, corporations, foundations, universities and international organizations involving some 10,000 individuals from 150 nations annually.

IIE publications and information services reach 200,000 students, educators and professionals each year through its offices in the U.S. and overseas. IIE publishes statistical analyses and research reports on higher educational exchange, notably the annual census of foreign students in the U.S., OPEN DOORS, which receives USIA grant support. It also publishes reference books, e.g., directories of study abroad programs available to U.S. students and training opportunities in the U.S. for foreign students. Over 600 U.S. accredited colleges and universities are IIE member institutions.

INTERNATIONAL BACCALAUREATE NORTH AMERICA (IB)
200 Madison Avenue, Suite 2007, New York, New York 10016

Bradley W. Richardson, Deputy Regional Dorector 696-4464
Paul B. Campbell, Public Information Officer 696-4464
FAX 889-9242

International Baccalaureate North America, Inc., is a not-for-profit corporation governed by a board of directors, that oversees the activities of the International Baccalaureate Organization (IBO) in the U.S., Canada, and the Caribbean. The IBO is located in Geneva, Switzerland. Responsibility for the IBO is vested in a Council of Foundation, chartered by the Swiss government. Members of the Council include representatives of national governments supporting the program, heads of IB schools, and ad personam representatives from a number of other countries.

The IB Diploma program is a pre-university course of study, leading to examinations, designed as a comprehensive curriculum that allows its graduates to fulfill requirements of the various national systems of education. All IB Diploma candidates are required to engage in the study of languages, science, mathematics, and the humanities in the final two years of their secondary schooling. This program is a deliberate compromise between the preference for specialization in some countries and the emphasis on breadth often preferred in others.

INTERNATIONAL BOOK BANK (IBB)

Carol A. Risher, Director . . . . . (202) 232-3335
FAX 745-0694

INCINC was established in 1971 by UNESCO to help developing countries in their efforts to obtain copyright permission for reprinting and/or translating copyrighted materials originally published in developed countries. The INCINC network is a means of making the 1971 Paris Revisions to the Universal Copyright Convention more effective. INCINC encourages developing countries to comply with copyright by assisting publishers in these countries to obtain copyright permission to translate and/or reprint with ease and at reasonable rates. The U.S. branch of INCINC operates out of the Washington office of the Association of American Publishers.

INCINC/U.S. offers the following services: help in locating the copyright holder of a given published work; assistance in expediting a response from a copyright holder to a request for reprint or translation rights; suggesting books in print on a given topic or publishers to contact in order to find such books; and answering questions about U.S. copyright law and its international implications.

Electronic Mail . . . . . BITNET:LASPAU@HARVARDA

LASPAU is an association of more than 300 institutions of higher education throughout the Americas. Established in 1964, LASPAU is a nonprofit institution affiliated with Harvard University and governed by an inter-American board of trustees. Through a variety of specialized services, LASPAU carries out programs for several sponsors including the U.S. Information Agency, the U.S. Agency for International Development, Venezuela's Fundacion Gran Mariscal de Ayacucho, and multilateral organizations such as the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank, as they cooperate particularly with Latin American and Caribbean institutions, and on occasion with institutions elsewhere that seek to assess and fulfill their educational needs. The organization also offers specialized educational consulting services to institutions both inside and outside of the Americas.

Each year, participating Latin American and Caribbean institutions are invited to nominate individuals whose professional abilities and dedication indicate potential to contribute significantly to both institutional and national development. LASPAU evaluates and selects scholarship recipients for advanced training in the U.S., or, increasingly, in high-caliber institutions elsewhere in the hemisphere. When necessary, LASPAU coordinates English-language studies, and then arranges for their admission to relevant university or training programs. LASPAU awards generally support graduate training at the master's level, but some support doctoral, undergraduate or non-degree study. Nominating institutions must reserve faculty or staff positions to which LASPAU scholars return.

MERIDIAN INTERNATIONAL CENTER (MIC)
1630 Crescent Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009

Walter L. Cutler, President ..... (202) 667-6800
William L. Mulldoon, Vice President for Management 939-5549
Patricia A. Johnson, Vice President for Development 939-5548
Carole G. Watt, Vice President, Training Division 939-5587
Richard K. Fox, Vice President, Programming Division 939-5575
FAX 667-1475

Founded in 1960 as a non-profit educational and cultural institution, Meridian International Center promotes intercultural understanding through the exchange of people, ideas and the arts. Intercultural training and professional study programs are conducted through Meridian's Training and Programming Divisions. International exhibitions, lectures, seminars and concerts are regularly presented, often in cooperation with Washington embassies.

Programming Division

The Programming Division, in cooperation with the Office of International Visitors at the USIA, develops professional programs of study for approximately 1800 visitors to the United States each year. The specialized in-depth programs are tailored to the visitors' professions and interests, and allow for the study of the U.S., its institutions and its people. Through meetings with American counterparts and exposure to a diverse cross-section of society and culture, the visitors' understanding of the United States is enhanced.

Training Division

The Training Division with offices in Washington, D.C., Miami, Florida, and Seattle, Washington, offers intercultural preparation for international employees working in the United States and for U.S. citizens relocating abroad. The programs set a framework for learning how to function to maximum efficiency in a new culture: providing strategies for successful decision making; analysis of customs, behaviors, and values that impact on life in the new culture; coping mechanisms for culture shock symptoms that affect productivity. Using methodologies that combine practical information with immersion experiences, and with an array of publications and video tapes, the programs stimulate individuals to rethink cultural assumptions, enhance skills, and broaden perspectives to help them function more effective interculturally.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES (NAS)
2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20418

Dr. Frank Press, President . . . . . (202) 334-2100
FAX 334-2158

The National Academy of Sciences is a private, co-optative society of scholars in scientific and engineering research, dedicated to the furtherance of science and its use for the general welfare. Although the Academy is not a government agency, it is called upon by its Congressional charter of 1863 to serve as an official adviser to the U.S. government in matters of science and technology. This responsibility is now shared with the National Academy of Engineering, established in 1964. The National Research Council, organized in 1916, provides for broad participation by American scientists and engineers and is the operating agency for both Academies.

Most of the activities undertaken by the two Academies are carried out by the National Research Council, which draws upon a cross-section of the nation's leading scientists and engineers for advisory services to government agencies and the Congress.

Partners of the Americas was founded in 1964 as the "people-to-people" component of the John F. Kennedy Administration's Alliance for Progress. Today, Partners is the hemisphere's largest private, voluntary organization fostering inter-American friendship and cooperation by engaging in economic and social development and technical training activities. The organization pairs 45 U.S. states and the District of Columbia with 31 countries of Latin America and the Caribbean into 60 chapters called "partnerships." Kansas, for example, is linked with Paraguay; New Jersey with Haiti; and Missouri with Para, Brazil.

Private citizens on both sides of the partnership -- forest rangers, health workers, city administrators, coaches, university professors, farmers, artists and journalists -- work together to mobilize community resources and carry out mutually beneficial projects in areas such as culture, natural resources management, agriculture and rural development, health and emergency preparedness.

PEOPLE-TO-PEOPLE HEALTH FOUNDATION, INC. (PROJECT HOPE)
Millwood, Virginia 22646

William B. Walsh Jr., President . . . . . (703) 837-2100
FAX 837-1813

Project HOPE (Health Opportunity for People Everywhere) is the principal activity of the People-to-People Health Foundation Inc., an independent, nonprofit corporation. Since 1958, Project HOPE has offered health-care education and training at home and abroad. Health personnel in the developing world are taught modern techniques of medicine, nursing, dentistry and other allied health fields. Eventually, HOPE-trained personnel assume full responsibility for teaching and treating their fellow countrymen and for administering their own health-care programs. Project HOPE's Center for Health Affairs provides objective research and policy analysis to help develop solutions to problems in the health-care systems of the U.S. and other countries. Currently, Project HOPE is conducting programs in 28 countries, including the U.S.

Project HOPE's International Textbook Distribution Program delivers medical books to some 40 developing countries.

SCI is a national membership association for U.S. communities and their sister cities committees. Currently, there are more than 900 U.S. communities that have sister programs with more than 1400 communities in 100 countries around the world. SCI members receive service in three broad categories: new affiliations development, exchange program development and volunteer program management. The Alexandria, Virginia headquarters professional staff and a network of state coordinators provide close contact and advice to local programs. They are available to assist any individual, organization or community wishing to join the program.

SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH COUNCIL (SSRC)
605 Third Avenue, New York, New York 10158

Dr. David L. Featherman, President ..... (212) 661-0280
Dr. Stanley J. Heginbotham, Vice President 661-0280
FAX 370-7896

The Social Science Research Council is an association composed of and directed by social scientists. Its purpose is to provide a means for scholars in the separate disciplines which make up this field of knowledge to work together to advance social science research.

Most Council members are connected with universities in the U.S. and, increasingly, in other countries. All who join Council projects, however, do so as individuals, voluntarily contributing their time and skills in whatever ways seem appropriate -- exploring newly defined problems; identifying gaps and inadequacies in current knowledge; improving research methods, techniques, and materials; and assisting the training of young social scientists.

The Council is an autonomous organization affiliated with seven professional associations of social scientists through its Board of Directors. Members of this body are designated by the American Anthropological Association, the American Economic Association, the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association, the American Psychological Association, the American Sociological Association, and the American Statistical Association. Members of other disciplines or professions adjacent to the social sciences often serve on the Board or on Council committees, e.g., educational researchers, demographers, geographers, legal scholars, linguists, and psychiatrists.

The U.S. Association of Former Members of Congress is a nonprofit educational, research and social organization founded in 1970 to promote the cause of representative government by improving public understanding of the Congress, as an institution, and of democracy as a system of public life. It is a bipartisan organization, chartered by the Congress, which operates four principal programs: the Congressional Fellows Program arranges visits by Congressional alumni and foreign parliamentarians to U.S. universities, and visits by FMC's to foreign campuses; the Foreign Policy Study program publishes studies on U.S. foreign policy and comparative studies of the U.S. Congress and foreign legislative bodies; the Counterpart Associations program facilitates exchanges between present and former U.S. and foreign legislators; and the Salzburg Seminar, an annual conference for young members of the U.S. Congress and the German Bundestag.

UNITED STATES CONFERENCE OF MAYORS (USCM)
1620 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006

J. Thomas Cochran, Executive Director ..... (202) 293-7330
FAX 293-2352

The United States Conference of Mayors is the official nonpartisan organization of cities with populations of 30,000 or more. There are about 1,050 such cities in the country today. Each city is represented in the Conference by its chief elected official, the Mayor.

The principal roles of the Conference of Mayors are to aid the development of effective national urban policy, strengthen federal-city relationships, ensure that federal policy meets urban needs, and provide mayors with leadership and management tools of value in their cities.

Collectively, Conference of Mayors members speak with a united voice on matters pertaining to organizational policies and goals. Individually, each member mayor contributes to development of national urban policy through service on standing committees and special task forces. Conference policies and programs are developed and guided by an Executive Committee and Advisory Board, and by the Standing Policy Committees and other special groups formed from time to time to meet changing needs.
